

TONY PORTER invites “well-meaning” men to leave the sidelines of silence for the playing field of action in ending violence against women. While Breaking Out of the Man Box may force men out of our comfort zone, reading this book can lead us into the end zone of positive change in our relationships with women, children, other men, and ourselves.

“Tony Porter believes “It’s high time for men who are “well-meaning” to begin to acknowledge the role male privilege and male socialization play in domestic violence, sexual assault and violence against women. He argues that it’s time for men “to claim the collective responsibility we have for ending violence against women. It’s time to become part of the solution.” In his new book, Breaking Out of the Man Box, Porter invites “well-meaning” men to leave the sidelines and to become active in the work of ending violence against women. Tony Porter is an educator and activist working in the social justice arena for over twenty years. He is nationally recognized for his effort to end men's violence against women. Tony is the original visionary and co-founder behind A CALL TO MEN: The National Association of Men and Women Committed to Ending Violence Against Women.”
